

Lexi worked for me as my buyer's agent back in February 2007. We had a unique way of meeting each other. While on an assignment for work in India I had made my decision on this property that I was interested in buying but I had no agent. I knew I needed an agent quickly but wanted to make sure I had someone I could trust while I was still abroad. I posted an ad on craigslist stating that I was looking for a buyer's agent. I knew if I could get a good written response from someone than this would help with our communication back and forth during the buying process. I liked Lexi's response and professionalism in the email and checked out her website which was very well designed. I could tell she was good at what she does!

Even though I was 10 hours ahead in another country Lexi's communication and prompt emails were great! She is quite savvy with technology even to incorporate text messaging when I was back in the Boston area! Most of our communication was over email with just a few phone calls.

During the buying process, she was an effective communicator between my self and the seller. She worked out all the minor details and even went to the home inspection with my friend.

Lexi's professionalism and great communication skills set her apart from others. Being a first time buyer I had a lot of concerns etc.. Lexi took care of all of these. She went above my expectations and I would highly recommend her as an agent.

Sincerely,

Carl S. Stone
